

Abstract

The present invention provides an interface between a portable communications device such as a cellular phone and the windshield display of an automobile, enabling textual or graphical data, delivered to the portable communications device to be displayed on the windshield. The interface also enables essential functions of the portable communications device to be integrated into the controls on the steering wheel.